Dear Mr. Vaughan:

April 26, 1979 an article appeared in your newspaper, on page 1B, with the heading Removal of Spots and Stains, by K. Lonnette Marsh, Extension Agent. There were some good tips in the article.

Carbon tetrachloride and oxalic acte (I think this should be oxalic acid) were listed to keep in the house for cleaning and removing spots and stains. These chemicals are excellent spot and stain removers. They are also both very toxic.

Carbon tetrachloride (CCl_4)[1] is banned for household use by the Food and Drug Administration. Fire extinguishers with carbon tetrachloride as the extinguisher agent was banned many years ago. It is slightly irritant to the skin. If ingested or inhaled, it may cause death or permanent injury after very short exposure to small quantities.

Oxalic acid ($COOHCOOH \cdot 2H_2O$) may cause death or permanent injury after very short exposure to small quantities of skin contact or if it is ingested or inhaled.

I am shocked that these dangerous chemicals would be recommended for use in the home. In addition to the recommended use, the article does not warn the reader of any hazzards nor does the article suggest the safe use of these chemicals.

It is obvious that Mr. Marsh is not knowledgable of these chemicals and hazards involved with their use.

Please publish a corrected article in your paper to inform the misled public of safer ways of removing spots and stains from clothing.

One source of information for hazardous chemicals is the book, Dangerous properties of Industrial Materials by N. Irving Sax.

Respectfully yours,

R.R. Spradlin

The Bible and Daily Living

By Dr. William L. Trimyer

Living With Leader's Choices

Lesson for July 1, 1979
Background Scripture: I Kings 12:1 to 14:20

Focal Passage: I Kings 12:6-11; 26-30

"If you (Rehoboam) will be a slave to this people today and serve them, and speak good words to them when you answer them, then they will be your servants for ever." (I Kings 12:7)

Trouble Is Brewing!

The decline of a national leader has a powerful impact upon the people of a nation. The United States has been through the tragedy of Watergate and the dishonorable resignation of former President Nixon. The scars of that national tragedy will remain for a long time to come.

Last week's lesson showed King Solomon asking the Lord for a heart of wisdom to lead the people of Israel. A big jump in the biblical narrative reveals a gradual decline in King Solomon's reign and leadership.

Whenever a national leader abuses his or her high office and the people's trust, they set themselves up for a big downfall. King Solomon betrayed his position as leader of the people. He turned to idolatry and oppressive measures against the people. In the end the people lost confidence in his leadership and rose up in revolt. In his place the people wanted Jereboam to become their new king. Naturally, Solomon was deeply angered by the revolt to sert up Jereboam as king, so he set out to kill the people's new choice.

For a national leader to betray the people's trust is a grave error. It is basically a drama in self-destruction. The further consequences is a loss of public trust and support of governmental leaders.

The Desire for New Beginnings

The people will stand for only so much political corruption. The time comes when they rise up and refuse to be taken advantage of anymore. When King Solomon died, his son, Rehoboam, was given the new position as king. Evidently, this new and powerful position went to his head. He refused to reverse any of his father's old policies and restrictions.

When a national leader refuses to listen to the voice of the people, they "tighten the noose around their necks." Rehoboam tightened his own "noose" by refusing to abide by the people's wishes. He stalled for more time, but it was clearly evident that he would not go "against the grain" of his father's policies.

OPPRESSION BRINGS DIVISION

Rehoboam was a "slick cat." He asked for the opinion of others but heeded only his own intentions. His attitude can be described as following: "Don't confuse me with the facts; my mind is already made up!" Rehoboam decided early in the game that everyone would play by his rules only.

Rehoboam was born with a "silver spoon in his mouth." He never lacked for wealth or opportunity. Even the older and wiser men sought to advise him, but he continued to pattern his political reign after that of his father. Rehoboam followed the thinking of the special interest groups, those who wanted a political monarch to play to the gallery.

Rehoboam's reign was short-lived. The tribes in the south broke off from the northern tribes to form their own alliance. The rebellious tribes chose Jereboam as their new leader. Although he sought to lead the people in newer and better ways, he, too, progressively led them to abandon God.

The picture is not a very pretty one. The tragic downfall of Israel can be traced to poor leadership of those who toyed with power rather than use it to bring about a better and stronger nation. Weigh the differences; a political system that works together in building a quality of life, as opposed to the nation whose leaders are in politic for self-gain only. Think about it!
